

ADVENTURE ALASKA TOURS
Incomparable Small Group Journeys on the Last Frontier

2019

“We continue to be reminded of how lucky we were to be a part of such a unique touring company when we compare notes with our friends who have done the ‘Cruise Ship Tour’.”

Randy & Cora B - Connecticut

“Thanks again for leading us on an adventure through the last frontier. It took me a while when we got home to get used to seeing more robins than bald eagles, no moose wandering along the streets and seeing the stars when it actually got dark!”

Abbie H. (aged 13) - Massachusetts

Adventure Alaska is an Alaskan-owned company operating out of the beautiful Alaskan town of Hope. We have been in operation for 25 years and have made Alaska our home since before that.

Adventure Alaska was set up to provide unique personal experiences in the Far North to the discriminating traveler wishing to experience something different from the offerings of conventional tour operators. We have limited our trips to very small groups and have focused on a handful of the North's treasures – many traditionally bypassed for their limited accessibility. All are based on a spirit of adventure and exploration.

Adventure Alaska promises an Alaska that most will never see – for those with that spirit of adventure and flexibility, we hope that you will come join us and let us share this very special corner of the planet.

Thank you for considering us and we look forward to working with you to make your Alaska dream trip a reality

With kind regards,
Barbra, Todd and Liam Bureau

Day 1 · Anchorage to Denali National Park

Our first day begins at 8 AM, meeting downtown with pick-ups at previously arranged locations. We'll head northward rounding Knik Arm and stop at the headquarters for the 1000-mile Iditarod Sled Dog Race. The displays and short video here give a good insight into dog mushing in general, as well as the lifestyle and the commitment that it takes to train for and run the Iditarod itself. Before pushing northwards, we'll have lunch in the old Teeland's Department Store building, sitting on what was the center of Wasilla in the settlement days. We'll then return to the Parks highway, entering the great Alaska Range of mountains and on to Denali National Park. Flightseeing tours of the mountain are available just outside of the Park and are very highly recommended (≈$400/person)—sliding between towering peaks and over monstrous glaciers, this is an indescribable glimpse of a world that few experience. If the weather isn't cooperative, we'll have another equally good opportunity on Day 3. Dinner and lodging are just outside the entrance of Denali National Park. Meals: L, D

Day 2 · Denali National Park to Paxson

After an early breakfast, we'll take the concessionaire shuttle bus into the interior of the Park. There are chances of seeing caribou, moose, Dall sheep, bears and wolves in the wide open vistas, with the vehicle stopping for wildlife or scenic photos whenever anyone would like. Returning by the same route, we'll leave the Park and turn back south to reach Cantwell, the western terminus of the beautiful Denali Highway. A 135-mile gravel road across wide valleys, alpine tundra and breathtaking scenery, the Denali Highway is open only during the summer months and is the only road through this remote area. Crossing glacial river and lake country, wildlife viewing opportunities abound in this large stretch of wilderness inhabited year-round only by the occasional trapper and wilderness hermit. We'll cross the Susitna River and follow the winding road over ancient glacial eskers and over the Maclaren Summit (elev. 4082 ft), the second highest point on the Alaska road system, stopping for photos or a short hike as time and weather permit. We then travel through the Tangle Lakes Archeological District, thought to be the principal corridor through which the earliest peoples passed to populate the rest of the Americas after making their way over the Bering land bridge from eastern Asia. Dinner and lodging will be along this road at a unique and very Alaskan lodge. Meals: B, L, D

Day 3 · Paxson to McCarthy

The Richardson Highway, following the old Valdez-Eagle trail, leads us southward through Glennallen and Copper Center. We'll stop at the new Visitor's Center of our nation's largest national park, Wrangell-St. Elias, for an introduction to this uncommercialized jewel more than twice the size of Denali. The scenic Edgerton Highway leads from here to the old railroad town of Chitina at the confluence of the Copper and Chitina rivers from which we will travel the tortuous abandoned railroad grade 60 miles through the mountains back to the tiny town of McCarthy in the heart of Wrangell-St. Elias. At the end of the gravel road we'll grab our overnight bags, leave the van, and cross two forks of the Kennicott River (by footbridge) to reach the near-ghost town of McCarthy on the other side a half mile away, the only means of surface access in the months when the river isn't frozen. Excellent flightseeing tours of the area may also be available from the McCarthy airstrip that give an incomparable overall perspective (≈$150-250/person). After a short hike onto the glacial moraine, and having dinner at the McCarthy Lodge, the night will be spent in the comfortable "Old Ma Johnson" Hotel. Meals: B, L, D

Day 4 · Kennicott to Valdez

A van trip up the remainder of the road four miles to the abandoned company town of Kennicott overlooking its namesake glacier, allows an almost unbelievable exploration of an entire town sitting much the way it was when the mine closed in 1938. The Park Service has been busy for the last several years, renovating, shoring and adding interpretive displays to the historic buildings, as well as the incredible 14-story mill building itself. Kennicott is truly a ghost town without equal, due to its remoteness and fortunate lack of vandalism. A short hike to the Root Glacier allows those interested to clamber onto the face of an active glacier. Lunch is overlooking all this incredible scenery before our van shuttle back to McCarthy. We again cross the footbridges to the van for the beautiful trip to Valdez across Thompson Pass and through Keystone Canyon. Dinner will be on the town in Valdez with accommodations at a nearby Inn. Meals: B, L, D

Day 5 · Valdez to Hope

If schedules cooperate, we'll have an opportunity to explore the wonderful museum in Valdez before boarding the Alaska State ferry for the beautiful ride across Prince William Sound. We should see many local creatures including murrelets, puffins, and sea otters, with a good chance of humpback and maybe even orcas or killer whales, as we weave amongst the many islands of the Sound before reaching Whittier. Here we will be reunited with our van and drive 2.5 miles through the Whittier Tunnel, the longest highway tunnel and the only one combining both rail and vehicle use in North America, which connects Whittier with the 1964 earthquake-destroyed community of Portage. From here we will head through the Kenai mountains to the tiny end-of-the-road frontier town of Hope on Cook Inlet. Far older than Anchorage, this first gold rush community in Southcentral Alaska is still a place of log buildings and an atmosphere that can only be experienced. Lodging is in cozy log cabins of Discovery Cabins, on the edge of rushing Bear Creek. Meals: B, L, D

Day 6 · Seward to Hope

Following a hearty breakfast, we'll head down the road to Seward and board the tour boat to head out into the Gulf of Alaska for the spectacular Kenai Fjords National Park, passing through the Chiswell Islands Refuge. Here we will view calving glaciers up very close in our small vessel and cruise the rugged coastline to view a tremendous concentration of wildlife including orcas and humpback whales, sea otters, sea lions, porpoises, eagles, and many different kinds of seabirds. Returning late afternoon we'll head north through the mountain lake community of Moose Pass and back to Hope. If inclined after dinner, we'll have a walk to the historic Seaview Bar down on the waterfront to meet some of the local "wildlife". Or, you might just like to poke around the old settlement and see the magnificent views of the mountains bordering Cook Inlet, before lodging again for the night at Discovery Cabins. Meals: B, L, D

Day 7 · Hope to Anchorage

After a leisurely breakfast, we might try our luck at gold panning, and visit the Hope Historical Museum before heading to the Alaska Wildlife Conservation Center to see up close some of those critters we might have missed in the days previous. Then it's on to the small town of Girdwood, home of the Alyeska Ski Resort. Here there is an option to take the tram ride to the summit if the clouds permit for a spectacular view of the surrounding Chugach Range and Cook Inlet, while others might opt for a short hike through the rainforest (yes, rainforest) after having lunch at the locally famous bakery. Depending on the day's activities, we'll return to Anchorage in the late afternoon and officially end seven incomparable days on the Last Frontier. Meals: B, L

Day 1 · Anchorage to Seward

Our exploration begins at 8AM, meeting in downtown Anchorage at previously arranged locations. Dispatching quickly with Alaska's largest city, we'll head for more tranquil locales, turning south and hugging the shore of Turnagain Arm where the Chugach Mountains meet the sea. Rising up over Turnagain Pass in the Kenai Mountains we'll then descend toward the Gulf of Alaska and the scenic town of Seward, situated at the uppermost reaches of Resurrection Bay. A deep water port that remains ice-free all year, Seward was one of the earlier Alaskan settlements, serving the mining and various trades of the Interior, as the southern terminus of the state's single rail line. It is also the historic start of the Iditarod Trail. Surrounded by mountains the scene is quite impressive, with the quaint downtown nearly at water's edge. After lunch we'll head out to Lowell Point for our afternoon sea kayaking exploration of the west side of Resurrection Bay. Back to land, we'll head back through town to the turn-off accessing Exit Glacier of the Kenai Fjords National Park, walking up to its terminus while noting the dates of its historical retreat (hint: where we park was mighty icy about World War I). After all this fine fresh air, it's time to check in at the Harbor View Inn and have a nice dinner downtown. Meals: L, D

Day 2 · Seward to Hope

After breakfast we'll be first in line at the impressive Seward Sea Life Center, to garner a good background for the day's foray into the maritime world. Boarding our vessel late morning, we'll head out of the bay and around the point, and into the Chiswell Islands Wildlife Refuge, sliding between the rocky islands that are home to an incredible variety of marine mammals and sea birds. Reaching Kenai Fjords National Park, the vast majority inaccessible by road, we'll head into Aialik Bay and linger off the face of a calving glacier for an otherworldly experience. We'll cruise right up to the rugged coastal cliffs, providing wonderful opportunities for viewing murrelets, puffins, harbor seals, and sea lions, with the stretches in between always holding promise of porpoises, sea otters, humpback whales and maybe even orcas. Arriving back in late afternoon, we'll then head back up the road through the Kenai Mountains to the end of the road and the delightful little town of Hope on the shores of Turnagain Arm. One of the oldest gold rush communities in Alaska, Hope boasted three thousand souls long before Anchorage existed. As gold rushes pass so did many of the people, with now about two hundred folks in the community. Its unique atmosphere is quite palpable, in the many log cabins, the log Social Hall, the one room schoolhouse and certainly in the local folk that have chosen to call it home. It's a piece of Alaska many have in mind before they come. We'll lodge for the night in Discovery Cabins on the edge of rushing Bear Creek. Meals: B, L, D

Day 3 · Hope to Seldovia

After an early breakfast we'll hit the road to Homer to arrive in time for our 11AM appointment with a boat. Enroute we'll follow the beautiful Kenai River through Cooper Landing and pass through Soldotna to skirt the eastern side of Cook Inlet with the towering volcanoes of Iliamna, Redoubt and Augustine framing the other side. We'll dawdle a bit more on the return trip, but the views are nonetheless, quite regal in any direction. Arriving at the end of the Homer Spit, we'll board the boat to cross picturesque Kachemak Bay. With the nearby mountains and glaciers on the other side of the bay and the Alaska Range across the mouth of Cook Inlet, it is truly a beautiful mix of geography. Aiming toward the mouth of the Bay, our captain will circle Gull Island and a few others enroute to our destination, giving great explanation to the sights before us. Early afternoon finds us on the dock in the unique community of Seldovia, inaccessible by road. Originally and still a fishing village, the name comes from the Russian word for salted herring, as this fish was the reason for its existence, prior to the purchase of Alaska in 1867. Seldovia is also a place of refuge for artists and those looking for a little less access and the pace of life that it brings. It's a special little town to wander, with the great Sitka spruce forests unlike any other we've seen, starting at the end of almost every street. A good stroll is in order before dinner on Main Street. Our lodging for the night is in a lovely waterfront Inn overlooking the boat harbor, where sea otters are a frequent sight. Meals: B, L, D

Day 4 · Seldovia to Hope

The morning is as leisurely as it should be, with time to further explore town or just watch the tide come in out the back door. Those looking to stretch their legs might try the “Otterbahn”, a great little trail starting by the school that weaves through tall grass and spruce thickets to end at the ocean for an unlimited opportunity to stroll or beachcomb. We'll then catch our return flight with a quick hop across the bay to Homer. It's almost hard to get back in a vehicle again, but we'll have to peruse some of Homer's singular shops, in this town known for its artist community drawn to the local beauty. Lunch will be in a local eatery. Heading back north, we'll pass through Anchor Point and make a photo stop at an old Russian Orthodox Church on a high bluff overlooking Cook Inlet. The faith of Alaska's earliest non-Native settlers remains strong among many of the coastal Native communities. We know the way, so Hope will seem like home when we get back to our snug log cabins. A barbecue is planned on the deck of the lodge, with a creekside campfire an apt possibility afterwards. Or, there might be those that prefer to head “downtown”, to Main Street that ends in the ocean, and the Seaview Bar that is often a colorful mix of visitors, locals, and gold miners still eking an income from the creeks. Meals: B, L, D

Day 5 · Hope to Anchorage

After breakfast, we might try our luck at gold panning (optional – $25) with some local miners instructing, with an optional hike in the plan as well. After a stop at the Portage Visitor Center for some wonderful Forest Service displays, we will then follow the road to the small town of Girdwood, home of the world-class Alyeska Ski Resort situated here due to a much higher level of precipitation than even the adjacent valleys. It is a microclimate that gives rise to a temperate rainforest (yes, rainforest) with flora completely different from Hope, just a couple dozen miles away. Lush ferns and undergrowth along with large spruce trees are dominate. Some might want to explore this environment directly, following the trail up Winner Creek to its beautiful little gorge, while others might opt to take the tram to the top of Mt. Alyeska for a commanding view. It might be a late lunch but worth it at the Bake Shop upon return. The Seward Highway hugs the edge of Turnagain Arm and we just might have to stop at Beluga Point to see if any of the creatures for which it takes its name, might make an appearance. And then it's on back to Anchorage in the late afternoon, each of us probably just a bit different than when we left, and most likely figuring out just when we can return. The Kenai is some of the best of Alaska, but then there are still many other Alaskas that remain... Meals: B, L

Day 2 · Denali National Park

After an early breakfast, we head to the new Park Visitor Center for an overview of what we're about to experience; there's a great movie and extensive interpretive displays. Nearby we pick up our scheduled concessionaire shuttle bus, the only mechanical means of public access to the Park interior. The 66-mile trip to the recently reconstructed Eielson Visitor Center offers some of the best chances anywhere of seeing caribou, moose, Dall sheep, bears, and wolves in the wide-open vistas, with the vehicle stopping for wildlife or scenic photos when anyone would like. Hopefully too, the mountain will be "out"... It'll be a full dose no matter what animals and views grace the experience, begging for a leg stretching short hike on the great network of trails near the Visitor Center. Then a bit of leisure in “Glitter Gulch” the less-than-complementary name for the proliferation of businesses just north of the Park entrance. Accommodations for the night are at White Moose Lodge. Meals: B, L, D

Day 3 · Denali to Gakona

Turning south to reach Cantrell brings us to the western terminus of the Denali Highway. Only open during summer months, the 135-mile gravel road crosses broad valleys, alpine tundra, and breathtaking scenery, and is the only road through this remote area. Crossing glacial river and lake country, wildlife viewing opportunities abound in this vast stretch of wilderness inhabited by the occasional trapper and wilderness hermit. We make a mandatory stop at the Gracious House; an old homestead on the road and one of the last occupied. Next we cross the Susitna River and follow the winding road over ancient glacial eskers and the Maclaren Summit, the second highest point on the Alaska road system (elev. 4082 ft), stopping for photos or a short hike as time and weather permit. We then travel through the Tangle Lakes Archeological District, thought to be the principal corridor through which the earliest peoples passed to populate the rest of the Americas after making their way over the Bering Land Bridge from eastern Asia. Just a few miles away is our lodging in a historic roadhouse dating from the earlier days. Meals: B, L, D

Day 4 · Gakona to McCarthy

After breakfast we tour a small museum just next then, then travel the scenic Edgerton Highway to the old railroad town of Chitina at the confluence of the Copper and Chitina Rivers where we enjoy a Park history intro in the nearby log cabin of one of the early settlers. From here we travel the tortuous abandoned railroad grade, 60 miles through the mountains. At the end of the gravel road, we grab our overnight bags and cross two forks of the Kennicott River by footbridge (the only means of surface access when the river isn't frozen) to reach the near-ghost town of McCarthy in the heart of Wrangell-St. Elias National Park. Excellent flightseeing tours may be available from the McCarthy airstrip that offer an incomparable perspective ($150-250/person). After a short hike onto the glacial terminal moraine, and dinner at the McCarthy Lodge, we spend the night in the historic Old Ma Johnson Hotel. Meals: B, L, D

Day 5 · Kennicott and McCarthy

A van trip to the abandoned company town of Kennicott where we breakfast overlooking its namesake glacier. Enjoy an almost unbelievable exploration of an entire town sitting much the way it was when the mine closed in 1938. The Park Service has been busy the last several years renovating, shoring, and adding interpretive displays to the historic buildings, as well as the incredible 14-story mill building itself. Kennicott is truly a ghost town without equal, due to its remoteness and fortunate lack of vandalism. A couple mile hike to the Root Glacier allows those interested to clamber onto the face of an active glacier. Others might choose the optional tour of the Mill building. Lunch overlooks this incredible scenery before our van shuttle back to McCarthy. Some might even opt for a return by the old Wagon Road, past the old cemetery. Dinner is back at The Golden, with the attached bar a must for lingering with the locals and getting a feel for those that call this home. Lodging is at the Old Ma Johnson Hotel. Meals: B, L, D

Day 6 · McCarthy to Valdez

After breakfast, we cross the footbridges for the beautiful trip to Valdez across Thompson Pass. Stopping at Tiekel River and the Worthington Glacier, we climb toward the pass where it's been known to snow almost a thousand inches in a winter. It's quite breathtaking in summer too.

Descending through Keystone Canyon, a dramatic waterfall-filled passage to the ocean, the challenge of the terrain shows why the route took many years to discover and pioneer. In late afternoon we have an opportunity to explore the beautiful museum and stroll the streets. Dinner in Valdez with accommodations at a nearby B&B. Meals: B, L, D

After breakfast, we board the Alaska State ferry for the beautiful ride across Prince William Sound which offers the opportunity to spot murre, puffin, sea otter, and possibly humpback, orca, or killer whales. Arriving in Whittier we travel through the 2.5-mile-long Whittier Tunnel, the longest and only tunnel combining both rail and vehicle use in North America. Just out of the tunnel is the excellent Portage Glacier Visitor’s Center, a town destroyed by an earthquake in 1964, and an easy short hike to view the Byron Glacier. From here we head through the Kenai mountains to the tiny end-of-the-road frontier town of Hope on Cook Inlet. Far older than Anchorage, this first gold rush community in Southcentral Alaska is still a place of log buildings with an atmosphere that can only be experienced. Hope is the Alaska many have in mind from stories past. Lodging is in the cozy log cabins of Discovery Cabins on the edge of rushing Bear Creek. Meals: B, L, D

Day 8 · Seward and Hope

Following a hearty breakfast, we head to Seward and board the tour boat into the Gulf of Alaska for the spectacular Kenai Fjords National Park passing through the Chiswell Islands Refuge. Here we will view calving glaciers up close from our small vessel and cruise the rugged coastline to see a tremendous concentration of wildlife including orca and humpback whales, sea otter, sea lions, porpoises, eagles, and many different kinds of seabirds. It’s one of the best one-day experiences in Alaska. Returning late afternoon, we head north through the mountain lake community of Moose Pass and back to Hope. After dinner, we might have a walk to the historic Seaview Bar on the waterfront to meet some of the local “wildlife”. Or, you might poke around the old settlement and see the magnificent views of the mountains bordering Cook Inlet before lodging again at Discovery Cabins. Meals: B, L, D

Day 9 · Hope to Anchorage

After a leisurely breakfast, we might try our luck at gold panning (optional) and visit the Hope Historical Museum before heading to the Alaska Wildlife Conservation Center to see up close some of the critters we might have missed in the days previous. Then it’s off to the small town of Girdwood, home of the world-class Alyeska Ski Resort. Here there is an option to take the tram ride to the summit for a spectacular view of the surrounding Chugach Range and Cook Inlet, while others might opt for a short hike through the rainforest (yes, rainforest) after lunch at the locally famous bakery. Depending on the day’s activities, we return to Anchorage late afternoon and officially end nine incomparable days on the Last Frontier. Meals: B, L

••••• Indicates included flight and charter boat ride between Homer and Seldovia

The land here is overpowering and dominates all. We'll experience both what first drew and sometimes drove mad, the earliest settlers. The stark peaks never free of snow, the ceaseless flow of the mighty Yukon, the glaciers that still carve the land—these are Alaskas that most will never know. Our mandate for this itinerary is to capture a bit of that same spirit. While only eight days, the pace of this tour allows ourselves time to steep in these places that can't fail to leave strong impressions. Contrasting destinations and an intimate variety of travel, from road to plane to river, serve to foster a deep appreciation for the uniqueness of these lands. This is not simply a tour of the North, but without roughing it, a journey through its elemental facets. Some come merely to say they've been to Alaska, but others aren't content with such a cursory look. If you're of the few where the name alone has long called, then this may be the tour for you.

Day 1 · Anchorage to Tok

The first day begins at 8AM, meeting in downtown Anchorage at your B&B, or previously arranged location. As the city is probably not why you came to Alaska, we'll escape forthwith heading northeast toward Palmer. We'll make a stop at the native village of Eklutna to examine their uniquely characteristic cemetery with "spirit houses" before continuing on past Palmer and up the Matanuska River. Dividing the Chugach and Talkeetna Mountains, the deep valley of the Matanuska is quite beautiful as we head toward lunch overlooking its source and namesake, the Matanuska Glacier. From here we'll rise to Tahnetta Pass and enter into the Copper River Basin before reaching Glennallen for a Visitor Center stop and a turn north on the Richardson Highway. Following portions of the early Valdez-Eagle Trail, the road features high bluffs overlooking the mighty Copper River with the volcanoes of Mt. Drum, Sanford, and Blackburn beyond, eternally white with glaciers. Continuing on into the Mentasta mountains and through the Alaska Range, we'll stop at a historic spot on the Eagle Trail for an interpretive walk, before arriving at the crossroads Tok. A grown up camp from the days of the emergency construction of the Alaska-Canada (Alcan) Highway during World War II, Tok is our home for the night. The Visitor's Center has some remarkable photos of our most recent reminder of Alaska's seismic youth, the 2002 Denali Fault Earthquake. Dinner is at Fast Eddy's with lodging just out the back. Meals: L, D

Day 2 · Tok to Dawson City

Twelve miles of the Alaska Highway leads to Tetlin Junction and the mostly gravel road to Canada, closed in the winter months. We'll dawdle along the way before reaching the memorable little community of Chicken (name explanation on location). We're now in the heart of what has long been known as "Fortymile Country", named for the great river that drains the innumerable creeks that drew and still do, the hearty soul of the gold miner. An area of repeated gold rushes before and after the great Klondike, the Fortymile is beautifully rugged country, dotted with ghost towns and some on the verge of becoming such even though gold mining is still a primary vocation in these parts. After visiting an abandoned dredge, we'll arrive in the outpost Boundary just before crossing the border into Canada. The famed Top of the World Highway (the name of which was inevitable with the sweeping vistas in every direction) leads us to the goal of all of the Klondikers, legendary Dawson City. Crossing the Yukon River by ferry, we'll arrive on Front Street hopefully a bit less ragged than the multitudes that struggled so long and hard to reach here in hopes of fortune. The great irony was by the time most arrived, all of the valuable gold claims had been staked by those in the country at the time of discovery. Dawson still has a very distinct atmosphere from the old days with the dirt streets and boardwalks. Many of the old buildings remain, due simply to the fact that Dawson was soon forgotten by the rest of the world and dwindled in population, though now much is under preservation by Parks Canada. We'll head out to the gold fields tonight or tomorrow, and wander around mammoth Dredge #4. Fascinating even to most that predict otherwise, the dredge is an amazing amalgamation of floating machinery and was the centerpiece of a type of mining and way of life that dominated the area for many years. Dinner and lodging in "downtown" Dawson, with a chance after dinner to lose your gold dust at the tables of Diamond Tooth Gertie's. Meals: B, L, D

Day 3 · Dawson City to Eagle

We'll leave room in the morning for a town walk led by a Parks Canada interpreter, wandering a photo museum and some intriguing shops before lunch. In the afternoon we'll head "downriver" and cross back into the States, this time taking the cut-off to Eagle. The road from here narrows wonderfully, winding up and then down into the valley of the Fortymile and on through the haunting mountains until ending up on the banks of the Yukon River and the frontier outpost of Eagle. You can feel a different atmosphere as soon as you drop down from the mountains into town, passing the old log cabins and schoolhouse before arriving at the Yukon and another Front Street. This first was and is still, a working frontier town. The stories and characters of the present as well as times past, can't help but fascinate. Accommodations for the night are in historic log cabins overlooking the river, two of which date from the earliest days of Eagle. In the main cabin Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen often played poker with then owner Jack Hillard during the winter after he made it south by dog team from his ship frozen in the ice a thousand miles north, picking Eagle with the only telegraph, as means to inform the world that he had at last conquered the long sought Northwest Passage. Dinner is at the local cafe with the mighty river in front, disappearing hauntingly around bends in both directions. Meals: B, L, D

Day 4 · Eagle and old Ft. Egbert

Eagle has remained an uncommercialized gem given its remote location at the end of the road. With its beginnings as the American center of commerce (and later order) in the region, Eagle is just four miles from the Canadian border and is one of the only almost untouched frontier towns of the early gold rush days. Still the hub of this part of the Upper Yukon at only 200 persons, far fewer people inhabit the area now than in its heyday. Most structures are of log and the town's amazing historical society has done much to preserve its past, from the old buildings of Ft. Egbert to the museums and interpretive displays of a quality rarely seen in a tiny place so seldomly visited. We'll take the walking historical tour that features many a treasure, guided by local folk with an obvious pride in their choice of home. It's quite a unique neighborhood and you'll undoubtedly want a bit of time to wander about and take a few photos, with an optional afternoon challenge of making it to the top of Eagle Bluff for some fantastic views. Dinner is a BBQ, overlooking “The River”. We will overnight again in the historic cabins, by now feeling almost a part of a very unique place on the planet. Meals: B, L, D

Day 5 · Eagle to Fairbanks

After breakfast, a few more moments are open to relax and ponder before heading to the airstrip for the flight to Fairbanks. It's universally with a bit of regret that one leaves Eagle, but the flight is an event in itself, driving home the isolation of the upper Yukon and the unforgiving country that separates it from, “civilization”. From the air is a perspective impossible otherwise, with the Yukon-Charley Preserve and towering Ogilvie Mountains to the north and the roadless and rugged Fortymile country below. The 200 air miles melt away in what must have been a dream to our predecessors toiling weeks to reach the same destination. With the second largest population in Alaska, Fairbanks serves as a hub for all of the northern part of the state. Even so, it retains a decidedly frontier flavor and its extremely harsh winters foster a sense of community alien elsewhere in towns a fraction the size. After installing in our hotel, we'll wander to Pioneer Park, an area where early Fairbanks has been relocated, with many of the original buildings. It's now a curious mix of history and commerce, with a wonderful pioneer and aviation museum. A true gem is the restored sternwheeler, Nenana, with a walk aboard giving insight into an entire way of life now vanished, upon which all of Interior Alaska depended for generations for almost every aspect of trade and transportation. Downtown Fairbanks is not far off, and though the contrast to its earlier version is apparent, Golden Heart Park provides a scenic and informative visit to the communities physical beginnings. We'll have dinner nearby, and then if folks are inclined, head to a local watering hole. There's a couple of famous ones to choose from, and it's in such an atmosphere that one finds a quintessentially Alaskan phenomena –that appearance or garb give absolutely no clue as to the person or station in life. Collars of all colors mingle and the bedraggled soul standing nearby that you've taken for a logger, may well be the local magistrate just in from his homestead before returning to chambers (personal story!). Meals: B, L, D

Day 6 · Fairbanks to Denali

In the morning we'll have a little more time to explore before the University of Alaska's excellent museum (that's recently been refurbished) opens with its extensive collections of early Native artifacts and cultural interpretive displays. This puts us close by the old mining community of Ester for a poke about, whose more recent reputation as home to numerous artists and practitioners of free thinking has given rise to the name "esteroids" for the local inhabitants. A particularly beautiful stretch of the Parks Highway leads south from here, as it passes through the Tanana Hills with great views of the distant Alaska Range to the south. We'll stop for a look at the displays in the old railroad depot, as well as the nearby cultural center, of the primarily Native community of Nenana on the banks of the Tanana River, before entering the northernmost portion of the Alaska Range. We'll spend the night in a lodge in Healy just north of Denali Park, to allow an opportunity for flightseeing of Mt. McKinley and Denali Park from the local airstrip (approx $400/person). It's an option highly, highly recommended but should the weather not be conducive, we'll have another chance the following day. person or station in life. Collars of all colors mingle and the bedraggled soul standing nearby that you've taken for a logger, may well be the local magistrate just in from his homestead before returning to chambers (personal story!). Meals: B, L, D

Day 7 · Healy to Talkeetna

As the vast interior of Denali Park is closed to private vehicles, we'll explore its wonders via a roughly six hour trip by shuttle bus with knowledgeable guides, operated by the park concessionaire. Even if "The Mountain" is not "out", there is still the chance to see caribou, moose, Dall sheep, bears and wolves in the wide open vistas, with the vehicle stopping for wildlife or scenic photos whenever anyone would like. At two and one half million acres, Denali is large enough to encompass an entire ecosystem, and so remains a truly unique environment for study of wildlife behavior unaltered by encroaching development. If inclined, there are some great optional hikes to get an even different perspective of the park before we leave the Alaska Range in the afternoon and head towards the charming village of Talkeetna. An old mining town, Talkeetna now serves as the principal staging point for expeditions to North America's highest peak, Mt. McKinley. Climbing parties from around the world can be seen preparing for and returning from one of mountaineering's most famous challenges, and the village airstrip buzzing with ski-equipped bush planes servicing the mountain's glacier base camps. It's here that we'll have another option to experience the mountain a little less painfully than the climbers, through flightseeing. Sliding between towering peaks and over monstrous glaciers, this is an indescribable glimpse of a world few experience. From our lodgings, you'll have the evening opportunity to explore some of the unique attractions of town, from the various boutiques of northern artistry, to the great little museum, to additional "wildlife" viewing at the colorful bar in the historic Fairview Inn. Meals: B, L, D

Day 8 · Talkeetna to Anchorage

We'll head south this morning, through the fertile farmland of the Mat-Su Valley, and into the community of Wasilla – the first evidence that we're trickling back toward civilization. It is here that is headquartered the Iditarod Trail Committee just off the main road. A visit to the organizational base of The Last Great Race, the 1000 mile Iditarod Sled Dog Race, allows one to consider the surprising intricacies of a resurging form of ancient competition, that is as much an intense lifestyle commitment as it is a sport. Any notion of dog mistreatment is quickly dispelled when one witnesses the level of care and devotion the mushers have for the true athletes of this intriguing sport. Having lunch at the historic Teeland's Store, allows us a measured pace before afternoon reentry into the throng of activity that is Anchorage. The contrast with worlds just visited may make your mind wander to thoughts of a winter trail lit by the northern lights, a team of dogs stretched out in front as the trees glide by...there is still time to sign up for the Iditarod only a few months away. Meals: B, L

Day 1 · Anchorage to Seward

Our exploration begins at 8AM, meeting in downtown Anchorage at previously arranged locations. Dispatching quickly with Alaska's largest city, we'll head for more tranquil locales, turning south and hugging the shore of Turnagain Arm where the Chugach Mountains meet the sea. Rising up over Turnagain Pass in the Kenai Mountains we'll then descend toward the Gulf of Alaska and the scenic town of Seward, situated at the uppermost reaches of Resurrection Bay. A deep water port that remains ice-free all year, Seward was one of the earlier Alaskan settlements, serving the mining and various trades of the Interior, as the southern terminus of the state's single rail line. It is also the historic start of the Iditarod Trail. Surrounded by mountains the scene is quite impressive, with the quaint downtown nearly at water's edge. After lunch we'll head out to Lowell Point for our afternoon sea kayaking exploration of the west side of Resurrection Bay. Back to land, we'll head back through town to the turn-off accessing Exit Glacier of the Kenai Fjords National Park, walking up to its terminus while noting the dates of its historical retreat (-hint: where we parked was mighty icy about World War I). After all this fine fresh air, it's time to check in at the Harbor View Inn and have a nice dinner downtown. Meals: L, D

Day 2 · Seward to Hope

After breakfast we'll be first in line at the impressive Seward Sea Life Center, to garner a good background for the day's foray into the maritime world. Boarding our vessel late morning, we'll head out of the bay and around the point, and into the Chiswell Islands Wildlife Refuge, sliding between the rocky islands that are home to an incredible variety of marine mammals and sea birds. Reaching Kenai Fjords National Park, the vast majority inaccessible by road, we'll head into Aialik Bay and linger off the face of a calving glacier for an otherworldly experience. We'll cruise right up to the rugged coastal cliffs, providing wonderful opportunities for viewing murre, puffins, harbor seals, and sea lions, with the stretches in between always holding promise of porpoises, sea otters, humpback whales and maybe even orcas. Arriving back in late afternoon, we'll then head back up the road through the Kenai Mountains to the end of the road and the delightful little town of Hope on the shores of Turnagain Arm. One of the oldest gold rush communities in Alaska, Hope boasted three thousand souls long before Anchorage existed.

As gold rushes pass so did many of the people, with now about two hundred folks in the community. Its unique atmosphere is quite palpable, in the many log cabins, the log Social Hall, the one room schoolhouse and certainly in the local folk that have chosen to call it home. It's a piece of Alaska many have in mind before they come. We'll lodge for the night in Discovery Cabins on the edge of rushing Bear Creek. Meals: B, L, D

Day 3 · Hope to Homer

After breakfast we'll pick up the Sterling Highway toward Homer. Enroute we'll follow the beautiful (and quite famous for salmon) Kenai River through Cooper Landing, where bald eagles quite frequently gather to scour for leftover fish. We'll pass through Soldotna, and stop at the historic center of old Kenai, where there was any early Russian settlement prior to Alaska's sale. Skirting the eastern side of Cook Inlet, the towering volcanoes of Iliamna, Redoubt, Spur, and Augustine frame the Alaska Range on the opposite side. We'll drive down to the water's edge and catch the unique fishery of Deep Creek, before visiting the photogenic old Russian Orthodox Church nearby. Situated on the prominent bluff above the old native village of Ninilchik, the light in the church belfry long served as a beacon for vessels on Cook Inlet, in the days before GPS. The views are quite regal in any direction. Passing through Anchor Point, the most western point on the nation's road system, we arrive at the lookout above Homer, needing no explanation as to why this is a favorite destination of many Alaskans. Glaciers and mountains rim the far view, with Homer below, and beautiful Kachemak Bay in between. We'll head to the wonderful Islands and Oceans Center for a fascinating look at the uniqueness of this area, and insight into the thousands of miles of extreme wilderness of the Aleutian Chain. Just out back is Bishop's Beach, begging for a beach combing stroll. Homer has long been known as an artist's community and wandering the main street yields several funky emporiums that prove just why. Later we'll visit the eclectic Pratt Museum, gaining further insight into both the area's early history and chapters more recent—namely the Exxon Valdez Oil Spill. Dinner will be at a local institution, whose decor and cuisine is better experienced than explained. Lodging will be just below our former lookout, with a magnificent panorama that might just beg for a long linger before bedding down. Meals: B, L, D

Day 4 · Homer to Seldovia

Arriving at the end of the Homer Spit mid-morning, we'll poke around a bit before boarding the boat to cross the picturesque Bay. With the nearby mountains and glaciers on the other side of the bay and the Alaska Range across the mouth of Cook Inlet, it is truly a beautiful mix of geography. Aiming toward the mouth of the Bay, our captain will circle Gull Island and a few others enroute to our destination, giving great explanation to the sights before us. Early afternoon finds us on the dock in the unique community of Seldovia, inaccessible by road. Originally and still a fishing village, the name comes from the Russian word for salted herring, as this fish was the reason for its existence, prior to the purchase of Alaska in 1867. Seldovia is also a place of refuge for artists and those looking for a little less access and the pace of life that it brings. It's a special little town to wander, with the great Sitka spruce forests unlike any other we've seen, starting at the end of almost every street. A good stroll is in order down the historic boardwalk, vestige of the pre-earthquake vitality of Seldovia, before dinner at the always excellent Tidepool Cafe. Our lodging for the night is in the waterfront Boardwalk Inn overlooking the boat harbor, where sea otters are a frequent sight. Meals: B, L, D

Day 5 · Seldovia to Hope

The morning is as leisurely as it should be, with time to further explore town or just watch the tide come in out the back door. Those looking to stretch their legs might try the "Otterbahn", a great little trail starting by the school that weaves through tall grass and spruce thickets to end at the ocean for an unlimited opportunity to stroll or beachcomb. We'll then head to the nearby airstrip to catch our air taxi quick hop back across the bay to Homer. From above the perspective is priceless. It's almost hard to get back in a vehicle again, but we'll still have time to peruse a bit more of this town that draws so many for its beauty. Lunch will be in a local eatery. We'll know the way back north by now, so Hope will seem like home when we get back to our snug log cabins. A barbecue is planned on the deck of the lodge, with a creekside campfire an apt possibility afterwards. Or, there might be those that prefer to head "downtown", to Main Street that ends in the ocean, and the Seaview Bar that is often a colorful mix of visitors, locals, and gold miners still eking an income from the creeks. The music is often phenomenal too. Meals: B, L, D

After breakfast, we might try our luck at optional gold panning with some local miners instructing, while others wander the historic displays of the museum next door. Heading out of Hope, we'll visit the Alaska Wildlife Conservation Center in Portage on the way to the small town of Girdwood, home of the world-class Alyeska Ski Resort situated here due to a much higher level of precipitation than even the adjacent valleys. It is a microclimate that gives rise to a temperate rainforest (yes, rainforest) with flora completely different from Hope, just a couple dozen miles away. Lush ferns and undergrowth along with large spruce trees are dominant. Some might want to explore this environment directly, following the trail up Winner Creek to its beautiful little gorge, while others might opt to take the tram to the top of Mt. Alyeska for a commanding view. It might be a late lunch but worth it at the Bake Shop upon return. The Seward Highway hugs the edge of Turnagain Arm and we just might have to stop at Beluga Point to see if any of the creatures for which it takes its name, might make an appearance. And then it's on back to Anchorage in the late afternoon, each of us probably just a bit different than when we left, and most likely figuring out just when we can return. The Kenai is some of the best of Alaska, but then there are still many other Alaskas that remain... Meals: B, L

While your trip with Adventure Alaska may be the centerpiece of your travels north, we can also make recommendations and assist you with lodging or tour arrangements to complement our packages. Many options exist, from exploring an area not featured in your chosen itinerary, to simply securing a room if you would like to arrive early for your trip. There are particular establishments and operators with which we are comfortable, and some “secret” spots we’d be delighted to recommend. Anchorage is an excellent base from which to head out by bush plane, train or rental car. Activities abound from sightseeing to fly-out fishing to remote lodge stays, and we can offer a bit of advice on which might best meet your desires. Give us your thoughts, and we’ll help you decide and then set up everything at no extra cost to you.

A Few Ideas...

Hope, Alaska

Hope is a tiny little gold rush town at the end of the road that retains a real frontier flavour. It is the Alaska many have in mind when the name is mentioned. While many of the itineraries feature time there, we suggest that you might consider Hope (if you can squeeze a few more days of vacation!) as a base for further exploration. Accommodations include creekside log cabins with shared baths.

The hiking out the back door is fantastic and other intriguing options exist for whatever you desire, from just plain relaxing to gold panning to world class whitewater rafting. Located 1 1/2 hours by road from Anchorage, Hope is also less than 15 minutes by air charter. Inexpensive scheduled van shuttles can also be arranged for drop off and pick up to destinations such as Seward, Homer and Anchorage. Hope is our chosen home and we’d love to share it with you!

Kenai Fjords National Park

Boat trips into the park are fantastic and more than worth the price. Seward is an easy drive from Hope and allows for a great day in the Fjords and Chiswell Islands Wildlife Refuge, with tour boats departing at 11:30AM and returning between 5 and 6PM. Tours that feature overnight stays on remote Fox Island in Resurrection Bay are also available, with great sea kayaking an option.

White Water Rafting

Nearby Six-Mile Creek offers some of the most exciting whitewater in North America, guided by Alaska’s most experienced river company. This creek has three canyon segments, as beautiful as they are thrilling. Trips featuring Canyons 1 & 2 offer Class IV rapids, with those opting to include Canyon 3 promised Class V water. Dry suits are provided.

Homer & Kenai Peninsula

The Kenai is home to some of Alaska’s most famous fishing as well as a wealth of recreational possibilities. Great jaunts include: overnight trips across Kachemak Bay to Seldovia; fly-out fishing or kayaking; deep sea charters from nearby Whittier, and oodles more.

McCarthy, Alaska

McCarthy is a truly unique end-of-the road ghost town, situated in the middle of our country's largest national park, the Wrangell-St. Elias. Here we have a wonderfully private facility, located on an island between the Kennicott River and McCarthy Creek. Views of the great icefalls delight the eyes, with the sound of the two rivers massaging the ears.

We're in the midst of building a lodge here, with the current state of progress being creekside tent sites, an outhouse and a dining cabin. It's truly a wild world to explore, with McCarthy as a great base for hiking (fly-out or from the island itself), ice climbing, or river rafting. Multi-day river trips to Chitina or all the way to Cordova are a fantastic custom option with our guides and equipment. It's a location that begs any length of exploration, befitting one of our crown jewel national parks.

Eagle, Alaska

Eagle is another gem at the end of the road, steeped in the history and stark beauty that so define the vast Interior. It's here that we've renovated a couple of historic structures and built a few new ones to enable our guests to linger in this tiny outpost unique unto itself.

Our regular trips include the Yukon and Forty Mile, and the Yukon-Charley Natl. Preserve awaits, just 12 miles downstream...

Other Possibilities

Small boat cruises: Some fantastic small boat cruises are available in Southeast Alaska as well as Prince William Sound, from overnight to multi-day explorations. We've some great places and folks we'd be delighted to recommend.

Glacier Bay National Park

Home to more than half of Alaska's active tidewater glaciers Glacier Bay is truly a jewel. Tour options range from day trips out of Juneau, to 4-day small vessel cruises that include hiking and sea kayaking.

Wrangell-St. Elias Nat'l. Park

It's our country's largest park. Air charter and bus transport from Anchorage make the Wrangells a fantastic place to explore, from the ghost towns of McCarthy and Kennicott to the wild backcountry.

Fishing, fishing, fishing

Many of the fish stories here are actually true and we will happily refer you to reputable operators that offer anything from one day fly-out fishing from Anchorage to overnights and salt water charters.

The Pribilof Islands

The Pribilofs are some of the most remote islands in the world, and home to the largest Aleut native community. Famous for their abundance of wildlife, here are found in great numbers seals, sea lions, whales, reindeer and over 210 species of birds.

Photographic opportunities are guaranteed with the local guides practiced in helping you set up for that fantastic shot as part of your tour. Activities include a visit to the historic Russian Orthodox church and guided naturalist trips to the incredible seal and bird rookeries, with an invitation to stay as long as you would like.

Package prices include round trip air from Anchorage, transfers, naturalist/guide services and double occupancy accommodations, with meals not included.

Option PRB1 3 Days/2 Nights (departs Monday & Wed.)

Option PRB2 4 Days/3 Nights (departs Friday)

Please call for current pricing.

A few others...

Among our staff, specialties in the art of playing outside abound, and we'd be delighted to set something up according to your interests. This might include mountain biking, scuba diving (dry suits only), running, kayaking or a simple hike in the mountains. Give us a call!

Why would I want to travel in a group?

Alaska is far more vast and varied than most visitors recognize, and traveling independently can be quite challenging. Reservations are required long in advance for most lodging and activities, as the summer season is so short. Our past clients, many taking a group trip for the first time, express appreciation for the convenience of planning that a set itinerary offers, as well as for the professional experience of what and where truly is of interest.

While many options exist for visiting Alaska, small group travel is among the most rewarding, combining the ease of travel arrangements with a very personal experience, highlighted by the perspective of knowledgeable guides. As the quality of experience for each participant is our overriding goal, group size is limited to six persons on some itineraries, no more than eight on most, and ten on select tours.

Who are your typical clients?

Our customary clientele is quite diverse, ranging in age from 9 to 84 years. Certain itineraries attract different ages, with groups often mixed between couples and individuals traveling alone. We've had numerous honeymooners (and even a marriage en route!). Some itineraries are popular with families, and we can try to arrange to pair similarly aged children if possible. Increasingly too, we have had the privilege of multigenerational travelers.

What about prices?

Travel options in Alaska obviously vary widely, and are generally more costly than elsewhere. When making comparisons, consider how the size of the group might help define the experience that you are looking for, and that the costs are necessarily spread accordingly. Our trips also include a full first and last day of activities, which is not the industry norm. Many companies also do not include meals or have "hidden" options. If you're traveling as a single and are willing to share accommodations, we also don't charge a forced, "single supplement". It's your wallet but it's also your vacation.

How strenuous are the trips, really?

It depends on the itinerary you choose. "Tours" stay only in established accommodations and dine in local restaurants, with light hiking an option. They are quite comfortable and are enjoyed by a vast range of ages. "Adventures" involve wilderness travel and camping and can be somewhat more rigorous by nature. Some destinations offer only rustic accommodations, and of course we aren't always able to guarantee the weather or unforeseen circumstances of travel.

No special skills are required and beyond good health, the only requirement is a keen spirit of adventure and a true desire to appreciate what is unique about these lands. Adventure Alaska trips are not for everybody and should you have any questions as to the suitability of a trip, please don't hesitate to contact our office. We'll gladly recommend a competitor rather than steer you toward a trip that you might not fully enjoy.

How do we travel?

Most itineraries involve a variety of means of travel in order to give a better feel for the particular area we are exploring. From trains to boats or on foot, each is integral to the overall experience. While all involve some road travel, we will be in specially equipped 15-passenger vans with never more than 10 persons.

What are the tour leaders like?

We go to great pains to find those that believe in what they are doing, because they are the basis of your experience as well as ours. This means that each is older than the industry norm and extremely knowledgeable on the areas visited, as well as the activities involved, and not simply a college kid from somewhere else, looking for a summer job. All are more qualified than you might expect, from safety training to natural history to just plain interesting.

Will we follow the itinerary exactly?

We attempt to stick as close to the itinerary as possible, but due to the wild nature of Alaska and the remoteness of some of our destinations, occasionally weather conditions, road construction delays and other unforeseen events require us to alter our plans. Flexibility is the key to fully enjoying your trip.

When is the best time to visit alaska?

Every summer month has something special to recommend it: late May and early June may still have snow on the ground and fewer leaves on the trees. This makes spotting wildlife (with their Spring newborns) easier. Late June and July feature stupendous wildflowers (including our famous fireweed) and, generally, warmer temperatures. This time period also offers the opportunity to experience Alaska's midnight sun. Berries are the stars of August visits to Alaska – and with berries, come the bears who eat them. Visitors in late August may be able to glimpse the first displays of the Northern Lights of the fall season, as well as the beautiful fall colors starting to spread across the tundra.

Those wishing to experience the “real” Alaska should travel with us on one of our winter itineraries. We provide the arctic winter gear; you provide a sense of adventure.

Can you accommodate my dietary restrictions?

Tours use established restaurants and guests may choose what they wish off of the menu. Most establishments offer vegetarian options and do their best to accommodate special requests. Please keep in mind, however, that at many of the remote locations we visit, access to the freshest fruits, vegetables and gourmet items is limited.

Adventures rely upon a combination of restaurants and camp cooking. Our camp recipes use some beef and fish, but vegetarian modifications can be made easily by your guide upon request. We strive to provide reasonably healthy and tasty meals with ingredients chosen for maximum energy, transportability and durability.

Most tours stop at a grocery store on the first day so that you can purchase any items, including snacks and alcoholic beverages, you require. Please note that you will need to purchase your own cooler, if needed, as the group coolers have only very limited extra space.

Please contact us if you have questions about your specific dietary needs.

What about the mosquitoes?

Alaskan mosquitoes are the stuff of legends...at least that's what you've heard from others who have visited. While it's true that at certain times and places in the summer, the flying insects can test the patience of even the most trail-hardened veteran, many find that bugs are worse where they come from! If particularly sensitive and you find yourself in one of those areas of “concentration”, here are a few tips that will make your visit more bearable.

1. Use an insect repellent with DEET and re-apply frequently. Though there are legions of natural and non-DEET repellents on the market, research in Alaska has shown that only DEET is truly effective, and lasts the longest.
2. Wear light-colored clothing.
3. Bring your own head-net or, if traveling with us on an Adventure itinerary, borrow one of ours.

What kind of precautions do you take against bears?

Almost all of our destinations offer the opportunity to view bears in their natural surroundings. While this is an exciting and memorable experience, we will be required to take certain precautions when hiking and camping in bear country. Your guide will teach you the proper techniques to use in bear encounters and while camping. In a nutshell, you will not be permitted to store food, drink or anything with a scent (including toothpaste, deodorant and lip balm) in your tents.

We do not carry firearms as we firmly believe that following the appropriate steps and using good bear sense are the best techniques for sharing the wilderness with these wonderful animals.

Adventure Travel: is just that!

We pride ourselves in being able to give our guests what the large tour companies (i.e. Princess, Holland America, etc.) do not – a chance to visit some of the out-of-the-way places, meet the true locals and support the local economies. Since most everyone has a different definition of just what is adventure, we ask that you consider carefully the type of trip you're taking and the level of comfort you expect. We very intentionally feature smaller destinations that have not been developed to handle large numbers, and as such do not promise the level of amenities found at larger facilities. We believe that this is integral to experiencing a more “authentic” Alaska, and the overwhelmingly positive feedback from our past clients makes us confident that we're succeeding in showing an Alaska that most visitors rarely enjoy.

Adventure Alaska trips aren't for everybody and we'll gladly recommend a competitor rather than have you take a trip that you might not fully enjoy. Our only requirement: A keen spirit of adventure and true desire to appreciate what is unique about these lands and their peoples. You'll be rewarded with a personal experience that simply can't be had on a cursory cruise tour, designed to handle many thousands at a time.

Tipping

We are often asked about tipping, and it is frankly difficult to come up with an adequate response. When it comes to gratuities to your tour guide, generally speaking, we feel it is entirely up to each individual, as each traveler's means and desire to tip varies. We do believe however that tipping encourages excellence and rewards a job well done, so with this in mind, we support the concept of tipping. And because we've been asked so often what an appropriate tip is, a possible guideline for tipping your guide is $10-15 per person per day. Please note that all restaurant tips for meals during the trip will be handled by Adventure Alaska. Tipping to outside vendors/guides (i.e. ice-trekking guides, pilots, boat captains, etc.) is at the discretion of those partaking in the individual services, and again, is highly recommended.

The Electronic Age

Items such as cell phones, ipods and laptop computers, though integral in many of our respective lives, can intrude upon the enjoyment of others trying to “get away from it all”, and so we ask that their use be considered and discrete. Many of the places we go are out of cell range, or have proprietary networks not always compatible with national carriers. Wireless connection locations are also surprisingly infrequent. Some locations still have satellite-based or very limited phone capacity, and are unable to accommodate non-emergency public use. What better excuse could there be for not getting a hold of the office—and remember, it is vacation!

Smoking

Is not permitted in the vans, nor inside most of the accommodations or restaurants, though one can certainly do so out of doors.

Food & Restaurants

During the itineraries, we provide 3 meals a day, with snacks available in the van (alcoholic beverages not included). We make no pretense promising “gourmet” meals, as food is not the focus of our types of trips (—but folks do comment that the meals are exceptional given the great distance groceries must travel!). Often we eat at the establishment where we are staying for the night, and as these are often somewhat remote locations, menu selection is sometimes limited. Meals are hearty (we do get “complaints” about the huge portions in Alaska) and sometimes include local fare such as salmon, halibut or reindeer. While camping, the guide prepares all meals, though assistance is not always refused.

Bathrooms:

For our “tours” full bathrooms with flush toilets and hot showers are available each night, with facilities occasionally down the hall, or in a separate building. For the “adventures”, it's the tried and true outhouse facilities while camping, and hot showers and toilets that flush when we're not “roughing it”!

Our Guides

We go to great pains to find those that believe in what they are doing, because they are the basis of your experience as well as ours. This means that each is older than the industry norm and extremely knowledgeable on the areas visited, as well as the activities involved, and not simply a college kid from somewhere else, looking for a summer job. All are more qualified than you might expect, from safety training to natural history to just plain interesting. Most are multi-lingual with excellence in French, Spanish, German and Dutch.

Patrick Tourne

Our longest serving guide extraordinaire, Patrick has been leading trips with us in consummate fashion, for twenty two years (it is a lifestyle). Originally drawn by the wide open spaces, Alaska's unique sense of freedom and possibility early on captured yet another, and he's been back every year, ever since.

Having led numerous times all of the itineraries, past and present, he by now knows more nooks and crannies across Alaska and the Yukon than most locals.

The "other" season is spent reacquainting with a revolving set of favorite winter haunts, from California to Australia to Europe.

Chris and Kathleen Jones

Chris and Kathleen Jones are our full-time "part-timers." This couple has been guiding tours for Adventure Alaska since 1994 and love to share their lifelong experiences in our great 49th state. They both teach all winter so they pack as much as possible into their summers, including hiking, biking, kayaking, fishing, camping & exploring.

Chris is a retired sport-fishing guide, having led fine folks for nine years on some of the best salmon streams in South Central Alaska. They enjoy spending time with their two grown children, Katy and Danny....and spoiling little Liam Bureau, their favorite Hope, AK boy!

Sheri Bluestein

After a harrowing summer season leading tours for one of the large, cruise ship organizations in Alaska, Sheri came to us in 2000. Her claim to fame and proudest moment as a guide was officiating the marriage of two passengers during a Day Hiker Adventure.

Aside from 14 seasons in Alaska as a guide, she has also led tours in the Northeast during fall foliage season and in California, and has acted as expedition leader for expeditions in Africa and South America. When she isn't in Alaska, she and her Dutch husband, Michiel (who also supports Adventure Alaska as a multi-faceted sort) work at McMurdo and Palmer Station in Antarctica supporting scientific research.
